In her role, Jackie Bertoldo advances research and strategies for promoting better food choices while working collaboratively to design transformative dining experiences for the Stanford community.

She is also a fellow with the Bloomberg American Health Initiative, training to become a leader in the field of public health while earning her doctoral degree at Johns Hopkins. She is a council member for the R&DE Women’s Leadership Development Program and the moderator for the R&DE Women’s Chef Collaborative Year of Women Chefs celebration.